

Plug pulled on TANC

By JONATHAN EDWARDS
McNaughton Newspapers

A $1.5 billion venture to string high-voltage power lines up and down Northern California fizzled on Wednesday, July 15.

The Transmission Agency of Northern California pulled the plug after 70 percent of the project's funding evaporated. The money walked when three of five utilities backing the effort bailed on building some 600 miles of power lines connecting renewable energy sources in Lassen County to energy users in the Central Valley and the Bay Area.

All three of the proposed routes sliced through Yolo County, one grazing homes in South Davis.

The Sacramento Municipal Utility District shouldered the most weight with a 35 percent stake. When SMUD pulled out July 1, the energy provider took the $525 million it expected to pump into the project.

The number two and number three players withdrew Tuesday. Without SMUD, they said the project didn't pencil out. Combined, the Modesto and Turlock irrigation districts pulled another $525 million. So TANC scrapped the whole deal.

"The project just wasn't financially viable," said TANC spokesman Brendan Wonnacot.

The controversial project drew heavy fire from the start, galvanizing opposition high and low on the political food chain. Residents, farmers, city council members, county supervisors and state legislators crucified power

Committee discusses dam removal, path construction

Although six items were listed on the July 20 agenda for the Winters Putah Creek Committee, the width of the path on the North Bank Improvement Project dominated the night. The path will extend from behind the Community Center to the area near Wild Rose Lane.

The meeting began with a presentation by Ben Woodside and Joy Tite of Callender Associates on different surface materials that could be used for hard surfaces on the upper path; the width of the path, and lighting were also discussed. Lighting will be domed lights at path intersections for safety, and not "up lighting," which creates light pollution.

Woodside presented Natural Pave, a new product of resin with pre-mixed decomposed granite that is made off-site. He said the product holds up, is a smooth pour with no score lines and is aesthetically pleasing, but adds $2 per foot to the master budget plan. Also, if the product comes from Merced, the Merced plant would have to make the product in the future if repairs are needed.

Mimicking the new school year cycle, some new faces are replacing some old faces in City Hall.

The Winters Planning Commission met last Tuesday, July 14, to welcome some new faces. Commissioners Pierre Neu and Wade Cowan were reelected, while newcomers Phillip Meisch and Dave Rodriguez, Jr., were chosen to fill the spots vacated by Al Vallecillo and Joe Tramontana. The former commissioners will be honored at the August 4 city council meeting.

City Clerk Nanci Mills swore in the new commissioners, minus Rodriguez, who was absent. Following their oath, Commissioner Corrine Martinez led the group in a selection of the new chairman and vice-chairman. She nominated Neu, who formerly held the position of vice-chairman. The commissioners voted unanimously to seat Neu in the chairman's seat.

Pit bull still missing

By DEBRA DeANGELO

One of the dogs involved in the July 5 attack of three people near City Park was briefly taken into possession by Yolo County Animal Control last week, as well as another dog that was not involved in the attack, after one of the bite victims said she was bitten not by the pit bull that mauled Jacinto Paredes, 56, but by a reddish mixed breed dog that was running loose with the pit bull.

Sergeant Wayne Buckley of Yolo County Animal control said the bite victim was unable to positively identify the dog that bit her, so both dogs were returned to the owners, who reside on the 300 block of Main Street.

Still missing is the pit bull that bit Paredes badly enough to require hospital treatment. Because

OBITUARIES

Luis N. Garcia

Luis N. Garcia passed away peacefully in his Winters home on July 17, 2009. Born on Aug. 20, 1922 in Morolón, Guanajuato, México, he was 86 years old.

He came to the United States at 20 years of age, and worked most of his life in California as a farm worker until he retired in 1991. He settled in Winters 41 years ago. Shortly afterwards, he immigrated his family from México. After retiring, he kept active by walking around town in the early mornings and recycling cans. He enjoyed family parties and gathering with friends. Before the passing of his wife, they were always the first to arrive at parties and the first on the dance floor.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Leonides García and María de Jesús Navarrete; his wife of 63 years, Ana Roque García; two infant children; siblings Elena, Socorro, Angel and José García, and a great-grand daughter.

He is survived by his 11 children and their spouses: Emilio and María Luisa García, Leonides and Graciela García, Esperanza and Antonio Villalobos, Rogoberto and Arminda García, Ana and José T. Salgado, Leonel García and Teresa Maldonado García, María and Pedro Arredondo, and Arturo García, all of Winters, and Luis and Ofelia García of Grand Rapids, Michigan, Angela and Raúl López and Raúl García of Morolón, Guanajuato, México; 40 grandchildren and 38 great-grandchildren, most of whom live in Winters; sister, Concepción García of Tangancicuaro, Michoacán, México; many nieces and nephews.

There will be a visitation on Thursday, July 23, at 6 p.m. followed with a Rosary at 7 p.m. at St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Winters. There will be a mass on Friday, July 24, at 11:30 a.m., also at St. Anthony's Catholic Church. As per his request, Mr. Garcia's final resting place will be back in his native Morolón, Guanajuato, México.

In lieu of flowers the family asks that donations be made to Sutter VNA and Hospice, 7300 Folsom Blvd. #100, Sacramento, CA, 95826.

lines, faulting TANC's failure to communicate with landowners, collaborate with local politicians and provide evidence justifying the project.

"It was a case study in how to do a dumb thing poorly," said Mike McGowan, chair to Yolo County's Board of Supervisors. "I think it fell apart of its own weight."

On Wednesday, from the grassroots of Davis to the lawn of the Capitol, the project's opponents celebrated its death. Davis Supervisor Jim Provenza threw an impromptu party with fellow members of an ad hoc committee forged to fight TANC.

Like the vast majority of TANC's critics, Provenza said he supports green energy and reducing emissions.

"All of us in Yolo County support renewable energy," he continued. "(But) this project was not ready for prime time. You cannot go forward with a project like this without including the public in the process."

With a growing population and state mandates for greener energy, California needs access to solar- and wind-generated energy, Wonnacot said. The project is dead, but TANC is not. The agency wants to work with utility companies to find ways to meet those needs. While only five projects were behind this power line project, TANC is a power line conglomerate representing 15 public utilities.

"Bottom line: New transmission is needed," Wonnacot added. "But it's not going to be (this project) that accesses it."

Yolo County is amping up for more battles. McGowan called the project a "clear warning shot." But, he added, "there's more to come."

"We've done such a good job of protecting open space and ag land that (Yolo County) looks like easy pickings," McGowan said. "We have to prepare ourselves."

The county's lawyers are working on an ordinance that would give the board a say on if and where big-time power lines get built. Also, State Sen. Lois Wolk, D-Davis, is pushing a bill that would place power lines proposed by public utilities such as TANC under the same oversight as projects from private utilities such as PG&E.

"While this project is no longer moving forward, the root problem is still there," she said in a news release. "The TANC project was a cautionary tale of what can happen when local public utilities aren't held to the same state oversight and coordination as their investor-owned counterparts.

The planning process for local public utility projects remains horribly flawed."

Grassroots fighters aren't putting their swords down either. "It's not over," said Stephen Cole, an El Macero resident dubbed the "bulldog" for his fierce opposition to TANC.

Provenza's party joined political factions including the county, the city of Davis, Davis homeowners, the Rumsey Band of Wintun Indians, the state senate and Congress. And they're not alone. Cole has been up and down the state talking with similar groups. Today, he travels to Livermore to help spark opposition there. Yolo County's lawyers plan to share their vanguard ordinance with other counties.

"We need to keep the grassroots in shape for the next fight," Cole said, "so the next time an issue comes up like this, we're ready to roll."

Cole, Provenza, and a half dozen others raised their glasses last Wednesday night and saluted TANC for bringing them together.

For now, the champagne is flowing.

"Yolo County: 1. TANC: 0," McGowan said. "But we ought not rest on our laurels. We can't be content in giving ourselves high fives and going home."

The winner will be the opening band for the Judas Priest and Whitesnake concert on Aug. 1 at the Sleep Train amphitheater in Marysville.

To vote for the band, visit KRXQ.net, and register to be part of the "Rock MOB." After registering, there is a survey of all the bands with sound clips and photos, as well as bios for all the bands, and an opportunity to vote for the best one. The deadline to vote is Friday, July 24. Self Centered has been playing together for eight months, and has already been to Hollywood to record a couple songs.

Rhythm guitarist and backup vocalist White says the band, which plays alternative music, will return to the recording studio in August and September, and hopes to have a full-length CD finished by October. One of the band's songs, "Bleeding

My Dreams" is already playing on 98.5 Rock.

The band members range in age from 19-26. Guerrero plays bass, Klingman is the lead guitarist, James Grafton is the drummer and Blake Grafton is the lead vocalist.

While waiting for fame and fortune to visit them, the band is playing whatever gigs they can, most recently Chris' Club in Vallejo.

Poly-Pane, a substrate that is "LEED Gold Certified" was also brought up by Woodside. The Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Green Building Rating System encourages sustainable green building and development practices. This substrate is $5 a square foot and has environmental appeal.

The cheapest surface, asphalt, is $4 per square foot, but might leach petroleum. The committee favored using asphalt over the other substrates, and discussed constructing an eight-foot wide concrete pathway, which would add about $74,000 to the cost.

Each substrate will have erosion and will leach material into the waterway. If cars are used on the path, the oil and pollutants will be washed down stream into the waterway.

The committee discussed a Class 1 path — 12 feet with 10 feet paved and two feet of decomposed granite, as well as a seven-foot paved path and paths of smaller widths.

Committee member Joe Castro explained that 10 feet, including a shoulder rated for all weather at 20,000 pounds was what was needed by fire and police.

Mitch Korcyl, from the audience, suggested that a 10-foot wide roadway was what was required from the Master Plan. Jeff Ten Pas, another audience member, pointed out, "a wider trail of impervious surface contributes to flooding."

The committee was divided on the surface material and the width of the path for a variety of reasons. Some suggested that a substrate for ease of rollerblading and maneuvering around pedestrians would be best. Some suggested a narrower path would be more natural and would be more consistent with usage requirements such as jogging; some wanted a path on which patrol cars could drive.

Suggestions were made for police to patrol the area by foot or use bicycles so that wide paving would not be necessary. Also, several committee members pointed out that there are several access points for fire trucks to use in case of a grass fire or other fire, and that massive paving or paving costs are unnecessary.

Woodside returned the discussion to the Master Plan and the bridge that would require funding. Costs must be reduced in such things as paving surfaces if other parts of the project are to be completed.

Overall, the use of the path for recreation and safety, the environmental impact such as permeability and run-off and the aesthetic effects of the substrate, plus the cost of construction and the lack of specific direction from the Master Plan, all contributed to the postponing of a decision until there is more information. The committee will know more by the Aug. 4 city council meeting.

Between items, there was some discussion on the marking of trees by the creek. It was made clear that this is not marking for tree removal, but is part of a plant survey.

Percolation dam

The percolation dam removal and update was presented by Rich Marovich, streamkeeper, employee of the Lower Putah Creek Coordinating Committee via the Solano County Water Agency and manager of the project. The point, according to Marovich, is to restore the creek to a natural plane.

"Use and history dictated changes to the path," said Marovich. "Our goal is to restore a natural form."

Another goal is to create a perennial water temperature conducive to trout habitat, said Marovich. The channel realignment begins with the percolation dam removal, then bringing in trucks, dirt, rocks, removing trees, changing the path and creating a new flood plane.

Ten Pas pointed out that the dam reconstruction is based on the idea that gravel extraction and major man-made changes occurred, but that no evidence exists to support that point. He said there is clear evidence that the current percolation dam already functions as a flood plane. He disagreed about the need to lower the creek or narrow the channel, and said the channel was 1-1.5 feet deeper than the overall average of the whole creek. Ten Pas said this put into question whether the need for the project was genuine.

Committee member Eric Larson vehemently opposed Ten Pas' concerns.

"For better or worse, council has approved grants for this project," added committee member David Springer.

Marovich said that creek access from the north side will be closed during the realignment.

Other items

The committee also discussed the following items:

~ The Evilsizor Easement required no discussion. Committee member Carol Scianna reported that it was done, but just needed signatures.

~ Meeting guidelines for conduct were discussed. All four guidelines were adopted after some discussion of the Brown Act.

~ Voting guidelines when there is a potential conflict of interest, such as a committee member possibly benefiting financially from a decision. It was decided that the City Attorney would be consulted.

~ Assistant chair person Bill Biasi was complimented on his great job as acting chair.

~ Scianna reported on work day event updates. A September workday is being planned. Also, herbicide use and tree removal was briefly discussed. It was concluded that trees, specifically the eucalyptus along the creek, would not need to be removed if excavation and tree removal would already take place in the Creek Realignment Project.

The next regular meeting date of the Winters Putah Creek Committee would be Aug. 17, however, a meeting may be held on Monday, July 27 to discuss the width of the path or roadway to be installed near the houses along the creek as part of the creek project. If a meeting is scheduled, it will be posted 48 hours ahead of time at City Hall. The creek project is expected to appear on the Tuesday, Aug. 4, city council agenda.

For more information about the North Bank Improvement Project along Putah Creek, contact Scianna, 795-4910.

DA warns of scam in area

Yolo County District Attorney Jeff Reisig wants to alert older adults about a scam occurring in the area. Recently, a local resident wired $3,000 dollars to a thief from Canada using this trick.

In a typical scenario, a grandparent receives a phone call from a con artist claiming to be one of his/hers grandchildren. The caller often tells a story about being out of the country and in some kind of trouble. It may involve getting arrested or a car accident, and they always want you to keep it a secret. Next, they ask for money to be sent as soon as possible using a wire service like MoneyGram or Western Union.

Reisig says to be suspicious if anyone calls unexpectedly asking you to wire money (especially to Canada), and to first contact a family member to verify the situation, even if you are told to keep it a secret. He suggests having a password or a security question for the caller that only a real family member would know.

Where is the outrage?

Dear Editor,
Hello, Winters. I have a question. Where is the outrage? I'm writing about the horrible and possibly deadly dog attack on July 5. Do you hear me? Not one iota of comment in last week's newspaper. Nada, zip.

Don't you realize what took place? Are you asleep? Wake up. The Animal Control officer allowed the (possibly) surviving attack dog to be returned to its owner. Perhaps he doesn't think rabies exists in Winters. Apparently this isn't the first time he's done that. I understand when Karen Benson Neil's dog was killed in a Pit Bull attack, he did the same thing.

To begin with, the Pit Bull is an instinctive killer. Just like a Brittany Spaniel is a instinctive bird hunter or a Labrador Retriever a waterfowl retriever, the Pit Bull was trained over many years to kill other dogs, and it does this very effectively.

Google "Pit Bull 411" and click on the first cache that says History of the Breed. Scroll down and read paragraphs 12,13 and 14. Why do you think Michael Vick went to prison? Just like our English cousins, he was running an operation where the crowd bets on Dog #1 or Dog #2. You then throw both dogs in an inescapable pit, and the survivor is the winner.

I didn't fight the battle, but I yelled really loud

IT'S BAD FORM to toot your own horn. But if you wait around for someone else to toot it, it probably won't get tooted at all. So I'm tootin'.

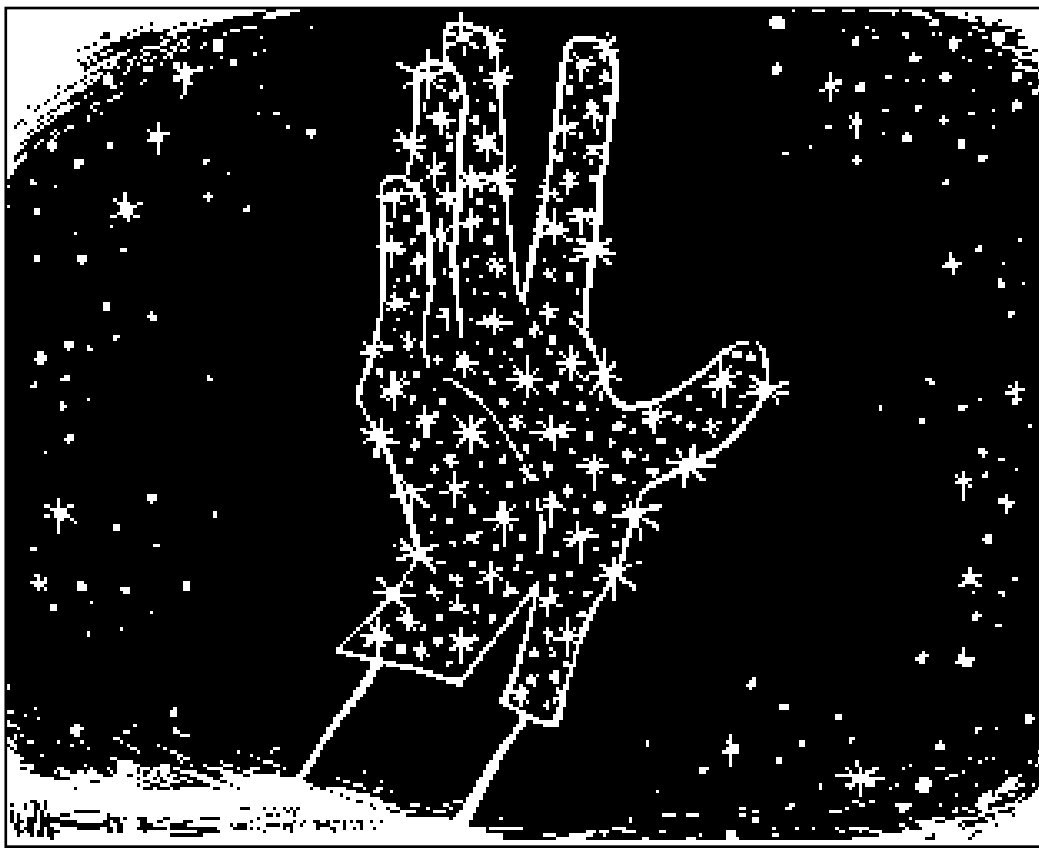

I just read Jonathan Edwards' very fine obituary for the Transmission Agency of Northern California's plan to string high voltage power lines through Yolo County (see page A-1). RIP, TANC. I'm hoping TANC's plan is really, truly dead, and won't thrust its gnarled hand up from the grave like Carrie to scare us anew. In Edwards's story, Yolo County Supervisor Mike McGowan said, "Yolo County: 1. TANC: 0. But we ought not rest on our laurels. We can't be content in giving ourselves high fives and going home."

Oh come on, we can slap a few high fives, as long as we each keep an eye out for what's over each other's shoulders. Strength in unity, bay-bay. Watch each other's back. That's what brought Goliath down.

So: high slaps to our Yolo County Supervisors, who didn't allow our county to be disfigured by a string of towering eyesores. Our supervisors collectively wrote a letter to TANC's general manager, James Beck, and spanked him good, not only blasting the proposal but spelling out to him like a recalcitrant child exactly what TANC must do before ever setting foot in Yolo County again.

One paragraph summed it all up:

"While we support the development of renewable energy sources, this project does not ap-

Hopefully you bet on the winner.

Lets look at two considerations: First, let's say Ms. Graf is competent with, and carries an unloaded .44 Cal Glock, with a fully loaded clip at easy hand. Upon seeing the dogs attack, she could have loaded the Glock, and bang, bang, bang, bang. We now have two dead killer dogs. There are no ripped slacks (boy, was she ever lucky), Mr. Paredes is not mauled, no medivac or 911 call required, which equals a lot of money and emergency time saved. Sounds pretty good to me

Second, Ms. Graf is walking with her two toddler grandchildren ages 3 and 4 years of age. A Pit Bulldog does not differentiate between a toddler and a dog. This is a fact. To them they are one and the same. So, the dogs attack, Ms.

Graf instinctively grabs the youngest toddler, and the 4 year old would be killed instantly.

Want another fact? A Pit Bull kills a human being every 21 days here in the old USA. The question becomes which consideration do you take? Me, I'll take the Glock, since I take my exercise walks on Main Street sometimes, just like Debra. I'll now probably have to go buy a Glock.

Appreciate all who helped

Dear Editor,

The Winters Aquatic Club and the Committee to Keep the Pool Open would like to thank the community of Winters for the generous support of our first fundraiser last Saturday evening, July 18. Those who attended enjoyed a hot poolside night (106 degrees at dinnertime), a delicious dinner catered by Cody's Deli, and a synchronized swimming routine performed by a talented group of City of Winters lifeguards, followed by a rousing exhibition inner-tube water polo match between the lifeguards and a bunch of over-the-hill-but-enthusiastic oldster swimmers.

These events left everyone who attended grinning irrepressibly, filled with great tri-tip and chicken and the possibility that we will be able to meet our goals of keeping the pool open for fitness swimming into the fall and perhaps beyond.

It is not possible here to individually thank everyone who had a meeting, thanks to the heads-up. How did we muddle through the rest of the time? That brings us to our next high-five.

Slaps to Enterprise reporter Jonathan Edwards, not only for covering all those TANC meetings and gyrations, but for sharing those stories with the Express. Which means a slap by association to Enterprise editor Debbie Davis, who also played a pivotal role in exposing TANC's insidious plans.

Had Debbie not been sympathetic to my whining about not having staff to cover that first TANC meeting, had she not checked out the website I gave her and discovered that rural Davis was also potentially right in TANC's path, had she not launched Jonathan out to follow TANC's twists and turns, a lot of local landowners and land lovers would have been in for a nasty surprise.

The one who gets the hugest slap of all is Winters farmer Stan Lester, who was understandably alarmed when informed via a letter (that appeared to be nothing more than junk mail) that his ranch might be slashed with towering power lines. He turned to his local newspaper for help, the day before we were going to press.

I did some last-minute poking around and discovered that the Winters city manager knew nothing about TANC, nor did the Enterprise. Even worse, the only somewhat local public meeting — which TANC never announced by press release or public notice — was the day after our next issue would come out. It had to get in the Express that week, or it would be too late.

So, I squeezed a little story about the Sacramento meeting onto our front page, which brings us to yet more slaps to everyone who still reads their local newspaper, saw that story, and attended that meeting to object. And Jonathan was there, noting it all. And all of a sudden, TANC was exposed. Together, the Express and the Enterprise did a set and spike. We didn't just shine a light on this cockroach, we shined a spotlight on it. And before it could scuttle away, our county supervisors sprayed it with Raid. As I said... strength in unity, bay-bay.

Sheesh, I'm so busy slappin', I forgot about the tootin'.

I am proud of my little role in all this. In this war against TANC, I feel a bit like Paul Revere. I didn't fight the battle, but I did yell "TANC is coming, TANC is coming!" just as soon as Stan Lester flashed the lantern from the belfry.

Toot, toot, toot!

That said... let's keep one eye on the belfry anyway.

NOT A GOOD WEEK. I should have stayed on vacation. After returning home last week, I received a call that my mother was being taken to the hospital by ambulance. Unfortunately, this has been an ongoing event for several years now, but nothing serious has happened to her. She has blood pressure and breathing problems that occasionally require hospital care. This time it was different.

My brother John was going to check in at the hospital and call me. He called from Sutter Davis, where the ambulance usually goes, along with my father, but mom wasn't there. I went to the house and no one was home. I checked with the local Sutter West and didn't see any vehicles there, either. John called ANR ambulance and they told him she was at the stroke center at Woodland Memorial.

He seemed to think it was just another visit to the emergency room so I went back to work on the paper. I finished sending the pages to the pressmen and phoned John to see if he had any news, but only got his answering machine. When I got home Sherri was asking what was going on because my sister, Lois, had called and said mom had a stroke and was in the intensive care unit in Woodland. I phoned John and left him another message. Sherri, my daughter, Laura, and I drove over to Woodland and it wasn't a pretty picture.

Our mother had several tubes in her arm, didn't have any color in her face, and looked really old. She was talking and seemed to know what was going on around her. Her left side wasn't working very well, but her arm moved and she had feeling in her legs. She couldn't swallow anything, but the nurse said that was normal after a stroke. The word made the room seem awful quiet.

She is now at a rehabilitation center in Sacramento and will be there for at least a couple of weeks. Color has returned to her face, her blood pressure is under control and they are monitoring her 24 hours a day. My sister Lois is here and we are meeting with the hospital on Friday to hear what they expect from us and our mother.

My vacation wasn't quite finished, so I did what any good son would do, I went to a four day golf tournament in Northern California. My father had told us not to change our plans just because of them, and when I asked him about cancelling my trip he told me to go. I phoned in every day and everything seems to be on schedule.

At our ages there are lots of people who have already lost their parents. We are lucky to have ours living into their 80s and 90s and living in Winters. I know Winters is a small town, but I want everyone to know that we appreciate all the kind words and prayers we have received for our mother. I'm sure she will be better, soon, and back home working in her yard before you know it. I'll add a note on the end of next week's column to let you know how she is doing and when she can have visitors.

For those who must know, I beat Woody every day of the tournament and ended up tied for first place. It still didn't make me feel good, but it did take my mind off worrying for a few hours a day.

I hope you have a good week.

WINERY

As for vice-chairman, Commissioner Glenn DeVries nominated himself, with Martinez seconding the nomination. The motion was approved unanimously, and DeVries will be vice-chairman, following in Neu's footsteps.

Additionally, Martinez suggested that the commission re-appoint Neu to the position as the commission's liaison to the Putah Creek committee. This was approved unanimously.

Finally, the commission held a public hearing for the consideration of a conditional use permit application for the proposed Peekaboo Hills Winery operations room at 22 Main Street. Martinez recused herself due to a conflict of interest, and DeVries attempted to do the same, but was told by the Community Development Director Nelia Dyer that he did not need to leave.

Dyer introduced Chris Turkovich, who is representing his family's winery, and explained that the Main Street location will mostly be used to produce, bottle and store table and dessert wines, as well as house their laboratory, office and cheese production space.

The hours of use will vary within the seasons. The busy season, from August to October, will see the winery open seven days a week, approximately 10 hours a day. On the off season, they will only operate two or three days a week, for about six hours.

Additionally, the first floor will also be used for events related to the wine tasting room, planned to open on Railroad Avenue, next to ARC Guitar.

Dyer said that the applicant met all seven conditions of the permit, and only one citizen called in, concerned about the waste, which may go into the sewer. She said that staff made sure that there was enough space at the waste water treatment plant to accommodate the winery's waste.

She also added that staff is proposing to make the winery's address 22A Main Street, because access will only be permitted through the alley, since the Turkoviches are only renting the back half and basement of the building. Turkovich admitted that the winery would share a bathroom with whatever business may occupy the front portion, thus making access from Main Street possible, but that this would not be the winery's intentions.

There was no public comment, and the item was approved unanimously, with two absent.

In her staff comments, Dyer also mentioned to the commissioners an item that the city council previously discussed about changing meeting hours from 7:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. A number of the commissioners were concerned about meeting earlier, mentioning that it may cause a hardship for members of the public who want to attend meetings, as well as some of the commissioners.

Commissioner Bruce Guelden spoke up, saying that at the moment, the commission was missing two members, and that their input should be had.

After briefly discussing this idea, the commission adjourned. They will meet again on Tuesday, Aug. 25, at 7:30 p.m., in the council chambers at City Hall.

the pit bull has not been found and the quarantine period is over, Buckley says Paredes will most likely have to undergo rabies vaccinations because the dog's owners were not able to produce any records proving that the animals were vaccinated for rabies.

"We have to go on the belief that it was not vaccinated," said Buckley. He noted that it is both a county and state law that all dogs must be vaccinated for rabies. The law does not apply to cats.

Buckley says the owners of the pit bull were ordered to turn it over to Animal Control, but they continue to claim they don't have possession of it. Since they missed the deadline to turn the dog in, they were cited for failing to produce an animal involved in an attack, which is a misdemeanor.

The dog owners may face anything from a fine to jail time, said

Bucklely, explaining that the decision will be up to the judge when it goes to court. Because the dog owners were not actually arrested, only cited, Buckley would not release their names.

The missing pit bull is black and tan, and is named Sugarpie. It may have been injured by a shotgun blast from a Winters Police Officer who fired on the dog after it rushed at him in an aggressive manner in the midst of assisting the attack victims.

Anyone who has information about the whereabouts of the pit bull can call Animal Contral via Yolo County dispatch, 795-4561. Call the same number to report loose and/or aggressive dogs, or 911 if someone is being attacked.

There is a leash law in Winters that prohibits loose dogs. However according to Karla Ferguson at the Winters Police Deparatment, the law is actually enforced by the county Animal Control officers. Winters police officers do not respond to animal calls or enforce the law themselves, she said.

hand in pulling this event off. We offer our gratitude to everyone who came to the pool, who helped organize the event, who donated to the cause, or who has shown support for our efforts.

Special thanks to Theresa Linton of Cody's for her generous support of our event. Thanks and kudos to Coach Kevin Chester who spearheaded this entertaining evening. Thank you to all the donors who contributed beyond the ticket price of the event. We so appreciate your generosity. Thank you to Debra DeAngelo at the Winters Express for supporting our cause and for her continued support of our aquatic programs. Thank you also to Nanci Mills and Traci Nakamura of the City of Winters for their steady support.

The Winters Aquatic Club will continue with its fund-raising efforts to help pay for operating costs to keep the pool available for swimming beyond the Sept. 30 closure date proposed by city staff and mandated by the city council. If you wish to contribute to our efforts, please contact Dave Kelley (795-2265 or email at dbkelley@jps.net) for more information.

Following the enthusiastic response to the wild, wet, and fun exhibition game this past weekend, Kevin and the City staff will begin providing opportunities on Saturday and Sunday (July 25 and 26) from 7-8:30 p.m. for adults and kids 13 years old or older interested in playing inner-tube water polo games at the Bobbie Greenwood Community Swim Center pool. The public is invited to watch or participate. The cost is $5 per person, payable at the gate. For more information please contact Kevin Chester, (760) 567-8081.

One thing we learned about fund-raisers as we put this thing together over a short period of time is that the efforts are not just about the funds we are trying to raise. The real benefits come from meeting and working with enthusiastic and concerned folks who are working and otherwise participating outside their everyday cares to accomplish something good. Thanks to all for that.

Can't attend Sunday market

Dear Editor,

In response to the letter last week from Ana Kormos regarding the Farmer's Market, I would like to comment that there are a number of people who would be delighted to attend the Farmer's Market if it was any other time except on a Sunday morning.

For families who attend church services, they do not have time before going to church and it's too late by the time they are out of church. Should the market time be changed to a Friday evening or a Saturday morning, I believe there would be a great increase in attendance.

It's great to have a Farmer's Market in Winters. I just wish it could be at a time other than on a Sunday morning.

Special to the Express

An 1897 Winters Agricultural symposium has inspired a second one to be held on Wednesday, Aug. 26, in the same opera house on Main Street. The Winters History project committee is planning a full-day program to be called the Winters Horticulture Symposium — The Legacy of John Reid Wolfskill.

A tour of the UC Wolfskill Experimental Station, a Buckhorn lunch, an afternoon program and a wine reception at the Winters Center for the Arts are included in the tentative program. Helping the local committee is Dave Fleming, proprietor of The Palms — located in the Winters Opera House — and the University of California, the sponsor of the institute that happened 112 years ago.

The event will be open to the public.

Also, the photo exhibit “Winters: A Taste of History” continues through the month of August at the Winters Center for the Arts. The historic local photographs were supplied by local families and curated by Joann Larkey, local historian and author. The gallery is located on Main Street.

Birds test positive for WNV

The Sacramento-Yolo Mosquito and Vector Control District received confirmation that five new birds tested positive for West Nile virus. Four of the birds are from the Galt, Elk Grove and Herald areas of Southern Sacramento County and one bird was found near Madison in Yolo County.

“Finding these infected birds is a clear indication that the virus is present in our area”, said David Brown, District Manager. “This needs to be a wake up call to all residents to take West Nile virus seriously and protect themselves.”

Dead birds are used as a surveillance mechanism to track West Nile virus activity in the area.

As a response to the five new bird reports, the District will increase trapping and surveillance in the areas where the birds were found as well as their larval and adult mosquito control efforts.

“We urge residents to inspect their homes carefully and drain any sources of standing water that may be producing mosquitoes. It’s also of prime importance to wear a good repellent if you’re engaging in outdoor activities around dawn and dusk when mosquitoes are most active,” said Brown.

To report a dead bird or squirrel, call 1-877-968-2473 or visit the California Department of Public Health at www.westnile.ca.gov.

Literacy volunteers needed

The Yolo County Library adult literacy program, Yolo Reads, is looking for volunteers to help with community outreach and event planning, August through October.

One in six Yolo County residents cannot read and write sufficiently to carry out day-to-day activities at work and home. In an effort to address this issue, the Yolo County Library has developed Yolo Reads, a literacy program which provides free and confidential instruction to English-speaking adult learners.

Outreach volunteers will help publicize Yolo Reads in the community, increasing awareness of and access to the program. Outreach volunteers are needed in Davis, West Sacramento, Winters and Esparto to visit businesses, agencies and community centers to distribute flyers about the Yolo Reads program. Volunteers must be 18 years of age, or older, have the ability to communicate clearly and have an interest in community building, outreach and public speaking.

Yolo Reads is also looking for a volunteer, 18 years of age or older, with event planning knowledge and/or experience to help recognize and celebrate the achievements of the Yolo Reads adult learners and the volunteer tutors who participate in the program.

"We need Yolo County residents to help us spread the word about our adult literacy program to those in need of assistance," said Patty Wong, Yolo County Librarian. "You can make a real difference. No experience is necessary, the hours are flexible and we provide all the training and materials."

"We need your help," said Yolo County Board of Supervisors Chair Mike McGowan. "It is so very important to give our community members in need a leg up by helping them to read and write. The time you spend volunteering in helping us spread the word can truly change someone's life."

To learn more about the Yolo Reads program, volunteer opportunities, or to sign-up to volunteer, call Yolo Reads, 866-609-7303, or e-mail heather.bratt@yolocounty.org. Training and support will be provided to all volunteers.

Televisions must be disposed of safely

The Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC) launched a video on its Web site, (www.dtsc.ca.gov) to remind anyone purchasing a digital television due to the switch from analog-to-digital broadcast to dispose of their old televisions properly. Do not throw old televisions in the trash or abandon.

Analog television screens are made out of cathode ray tubes or CRTs. CRTs also used as computer monitors, automated teller machines, and video game machines. Depending on the size, the glass screens can contain several pounds of lead. When CRTs are disposed of in a regular landfill, the screens are broken, the glass pulverized, and the lead escapes the glass, potentially threatening drinking water sources.

Lead is a toxic metal that can cause harm to adults and children. It can affect almost every organ in the human body, but is best known for damaging the nervous system including decreased mental ability and learning difficulties in infants.

DTSC urges those who are replacing their televisions to locate collectors and recyclers authorized to take unwanted televisions and other electronic waste. A fee charged on the purchase of new television and certain other electronic devices helps fund collection and recycling of old video display devices, so many collectors will accept televisions for free, or charge only a nominal fee.

To find a nearby collector, visit www.ecycle.org. For more information about how to properly manage electronic waste under California law, see www.dtsc.ca.gov or call (916) 324-3159.

'All's Well' with Shakespeare in the Park

By GERMAINE HUPE
Special to the Express

Shakespeare in the Park has become an annual presentation of the Winters Theatre Company's summer season. This year's play selection, "All's Well That Ends Well," opening Aug. 7, features an unusual twist to the traditional Shakespearean comedy plot in that it concerns the class system of Elizabethan society.

Shakespeare was a man of his time, and, as such, he knew very well that the lord of the manor did not marry the chamber maid or the daughter of a peasant. Marriages were arranged with careful attention to family prestige, social advancement, financial considerations, and even advantage in war and politics. Often the young couple, and especially the young woman, had little to say about the choice of a spouse. Therefore, when the play's plot centers on the daughter of a renowned physician and her marriage to a wealthy count who rejects her as "low born," there are major problems which must be solved before the final curtain.

Helena, the leading lady, is not a barefoot peasant; she is a well educated daughter of the rising professional class. However, she is not a noble and has no title. Thus Bertram, the young count, who has been forced to marry her by the King's decree, deserts her on their wedding day and marches off to achieve glory in foreign wars.

All other characters in the play recognize Helena's virtue and worth, but these qualities mean nothing to the class conscious and self centered young lord. The negative results of the "Cinderella" theme is an unusual one for the Bard of Avon. Shakespeare seems to be asking the question of where true nobility lies: is it in patrician birth or in high moral character?

The audience is invited to consider this and several other plot complications as "All's Well That Ends Well" is presented on the outdoor stage of the Community Center.

The production opens Friday, Aug. 7, and continues Saturday, Aug. 8, Friday, Aug. 14, and Saturday, Aug. 15. All performances start at 8 p.m. Admission is $5 for adults; children under twelve are free when accompanied by an adult. The Saturday, August 8 show is a benefit for the Winters Center for the Arts; admission is $10 and includes refreshments. Tickets are available at Pacific Ace Hardware, the Chamber of Commerce office, and the Participation Gallery. Reservations and information are available at 795-4014.

Audience members are encouraged to bring a lawn chair, a picnic supper, and enjoy Shakespeare under the stars at "All's Well That Ends Well."

Cheap food has steep health costs for kids

MADISON, Wis. — When diabetes educator Eva Marie Vivian sees overweight minority children, she sees a generational tragedy unfolding.

Type 2 diabetes was virtually unheard of in children a generation ago, but now as many as 3,700 young people were newly diagnosed with type 2 diabetes in a single year — a diagnosis much more common among Native American, Hispanic or African American children. At current rates, it is estimated that one in three children born in the year 2000 will eventually develop diabetes. And it's not just the diabetes — cardiovascular disease, kidney and eye damage, and other complications can follow uncontrolled diabetes.

"A 12-year-old with Type 2 diabetes may develop coronary artery disease by age 35," said Vivian, associate clinical professor in the University of Wisconsin School of Pharmacy. "We're talking about a generation of children that might not outlive their parents."

Vivian says that some heavily Hispanic zip codes in Los Angeles have rates of childhood obesity approaching 90 percent. And her recent research in Madison, Wis., shows that things aren't much better in the Midwest. She recently screened 86 children (63 percent African-American, 34 percent Latino, 3 percent white) in community settings such as churches and food pantries. She found that 54 percent were overweight or obese, conditions that can set them up for developing Type 2 diabetes, in which the body becomes resistant to insulin.

"While more than half of the children were overweight, it's interesting that only 10 percent of parents reported that they thought their children were overweight," Vivian said. "It may be because many of the parents are overweight themselves."

So, is this merely a case of children inheriting bad genes? No.

"Genes may load the gun, but your environment and lifestyle pull the trigger," Vivian said.

As part of her screening, she queried parents about the factors causing children to gain weight. What she learned is startling:

- ~ About 31 percent of the children consume fast food more than twice a week
- ~ 86 percent watch

more than two hours of television.

- ~ Among the obese and overweight children, television watching was more than three hours a day.
- ~ The parents themselves reported being too busy with work to prepare home-cooked meals.

Vivian's research is aimed at identifying factors that people can change to lose weight and reduce the risk of developing Type 2 diabetes. Her work is funded by the UW Institute for Clinical and Translational Research (ICTR), part of a national effort to get medical research more quickly from the laboratories into the community.

"One problem is that some parents also eat unhealthy foods, and the children follow their parents," Vivian said. "The good news is that when you ask adults to change their lifestyle, they're more likely to be receptive if it involves helping their children."

Is your child at risk for diabetes?

- ~ Is your child African-American/black, Latino/Hispanic, Native American or Asian/Pacific Islander?
- ~ Does your child have a sister or brother with diabetes?
- ~ Does your child have a parent or grandparent with diabetes?
- ~ Has a health care provider told you your child is overweight or do you feel your child is overweight?
- ~ Does your child (between ages 10-19) get little or no exercise?

- ~ Does your child have a dark skin patch around the neck or in the armpits?
- ~ Has a doctor said your child has high blood pressure?
- ~ Has a doctor said your child has high cholesterol?
- ~ Has your daughter had irregular periods, excess facial hair or unusual weight gain?

If you answered yes to two or more questions, your child may be at risk for having or developing diabetes. You should talk to a health care provider.

Dance therapy classes planned for cancer patients

Cancer patients and survivors are invited to dance movement therapy classes taught by Nandi Szabo, M.A., ADTR, registered dance movement therapist. The classes will be held each Thursday, beginning Aug. 27, from 8:30-10:30 a.m.

Dance movement therapy is based on the interrelationship of body, mind and emotion. It facilitates healing and wellness through improved body image, energy level and sense of self. It uses movement to further the emotional, physical and spiritual integration of the individual. Limited body movement does not preclude participation, but consulting with your physician is required prior to class. Space is limited.

This program is sponsored by the Sutter Cancer Center, Sacramento through funding from the Sutter Medical Center Foundation. To register, call (916) 529-1079 or e-mail zoefotoni@comcast.net. The class location has yet to be determined.

Free blood pressure checks offered every Wednesday

Free blood pressure screenings are provided to the public every Wednesday from 10 a.m. to noon in the Sutter Davis Hospital main lobby. For more information, or to learn about volunteer opportunities at Sutter Davis, call the Hospital Information Desk at 759-7485.

Inner tube water polo games set for this weekend

By KEVIN CHESTER
Special to the Express

The Bobbie Greenwood Community Swim Center Pool provides many opportunities for families and individuals to enjoy water sports, get fit, and socialize a bit.

The latest opportunities for wet fun-and-fitness activities are pickup inner tube water polo games, planned for Saturday and Sunday, July 24-25, 7-8:30 p.m. The Winters community is invited to come to the pool and participate in — or just watch — an exciting new-to-Winters recreational event.

Participants must be 13 years old or older to participate, as a certain level of comfort in the water is required. However, one need not be an experienced swimmer or have any advanced aquatic skills—the use of one-size-fits-all inner tubes helps equalize the aquatic abilities of the participants so that anyone with reasonable swimming skills can compete.

The cost to participate is $5 per person, which will be collected at the gate.

The overall objective is to initiate the sport in Winters so that the community might develop league play and a schedule that encourages teams to form.

The community is invited to come out for a fun evening and support efforts to keep the pool open and local swimming programs strong.

For more information, call Coach Kevin Chester, (760) 567-8081, or Winters Aquatic Club president Dave Kelley, 795-2265. Kelley can also be reached via email at dbkelley@jps.net).

For physicals to be valid for the next school year they must be dated June 1, 2009 or later. All paperwork (physicals and permission forms) from this school year will be thrown out.

Reduced rate physicals for athletes will be held on Wednesday, July 29 from 3 - 6 p.m. at the Winters Care Center (Sutter) in Winters. The cost is $20, which may be paid in cash or checks. Students may get their physical through their own doctor at some other time, but should come to the school office to get the proper forms.

School board approves minor repairs

By MOLLY DAVIS
Staff writer

The Winters Joint Unified School Board met for a brief meeting on Thursday, July 16, to approve some minor changes to a roof repair, and to hear updates on the year-end attendance report.

Minus board member Matt Brickey, the members heard the new Superintendent's quick report.

"I have enjoyed my first 16 days in the district," said Superintendent Rebecca Gillespie, receiving a few laughs. She replaces the interim Superintendent Pat Lewis.

As there was no public comment, board president Mary Jo Rodolfa called for an action on approval of a roof repair and coating changes to the district office. She explained that the contractor found an unforeseen condition that was not part of the original contract, and that some of the office's roof panels would have to be replaced.

Additionally, it was discovered that the skylights needed sealing, and staff recommended that the board approve the changes, which they did unanimously, minus Brickey. The changes will cost just under

The board also heard from Gloria Hahn, the chief business officer, who informed them that the 11th month attendance report showed that the ending enrollment for all the schools in the district was 21 less students than projected, meaning that the district lost $22,496 in absences.

She also mentioned that kindergarten and high school students historically have the most absences. The board discussed the idea that some parents don't think kindergarten is as important, and is more "optional." However, kindergarten is crucial for early development and learning, and children are beginning to read and understand math much earlier.

Hahn also told the board that the annual report of attendance is down by six for the coming school year.

After unanimously approving the consent agenda, and breezing through the informal review of the governance team, the board adjourned, and will meet again on Thursday, August 6, at 6:30 p.m., in the Walnut Room at the district office.

The second category was "Who Can Hold the Elevator the Longest." Team members Tyler Pearce, Morgan Wright, Brittanie Hedrick and Olivia Manas placed second.

The final category was a stunt sequence. Team members Prestlie Pearce, Courtney Corrales, Stacy Gillespie and Emily Delao learned a stunt sequence while at camp and decided to perform it for the competition.

Children hooked on new Fishing Camp

Thirty special needs and underprivileged children experienced fun and success at the first Kids Camp at Lake Solano Park last weekend. The camp directors hope to make the event an annual outing for children in the Solano and Yolo counties.

Founded by Kids Day of Fishing, Inc., a non-profit organization best known for sponsoring annual Fishing Derbies at Lake Solano and Dover Pond, the Kids Camp was a two day, one night event hosted by the Fairfield Suisun Twilight Rotary with support from other local individuals and organizations.

Children spent Saturday exploring the aquariums full of live fish at the new Lake Solano Park Nature Center, making various crafts and first aid kits, and learning about fish ecology from educators with WaterWays.

Solano Sheriffs and Fairfield Fire Department demonstrated the skills of their trained canine units, while the International Bird Rescue Research Center demonstrated the dangers of improperly discarded fishing line to birds and other wildlife.

Tent camping with marshmallow roasting Saturday night was a brand new experience for many of the participants, whose parents and guardians assisted them throughout the event.

With individualized instruction Sunday morning, children learned to successfully hook plump large-mouth bass planted by Lazy Q Fish Ranch with their new fishing rods, reels, and live bait. An old-fashioned fish fry feed ensued with over 100 pounds of bass and catfish prepared, to the great delight of everyone participating.

"I don't eat fish," remarked one young angler, "but this is good!"

The event wrapped up with a ceremony acknowledging each participant with a medal, a fully-stocked tackle box in addition to a new rod and reel, and a big round of applause for the enthusiastic volunteers who made the Kids Fishing Camp a rousing success.

Those interested in learning more about this and similar events, or in becoming a volunteer or supporter, can visit the Kids Day of Fishing, Inc. website, www.kidsdayoffishing.org or contact the organization's president, Mike Johns, by emailing him at captmike@kidsdayoffishing.org.

Bird banding program offered for children

California Waterfowl and the Yolo Basin Foundation will offer a unique opportunity for young people, ages 10-17, to participate in waterfowl banding on Friday, July 24, 8-11:30 a.m. at the Yolo Bypass Wildlife Area. Participants will suit up in waders and help California Waterfowl biologists capture, band and record data on waterfowl.

Following the banding, California Waterfowl will offer a wetland snack, complete with wild game, blackberries, rice, mint, and other delicious foods grown in wetland environments for the participants. At that time the youth will have a chance to speak with wildlife professionals about their work, career paths, waterfowl biology and wetlands stewardship.

This special event is free, but space is limited to 15 youth and reservations are required. To register please email Sarah Ross at the Yolo Basin Foundation at sross@yolobasin.org or call her at 757-4828. Directions and other details will be provided when reservations are made.

California Waterfowl is an award winning non-profit, hunter-supported conservation organization with a mission to conserve the state's waterfowl, wetlands, and hunting heritage. In the last 20 years the organization has restored, protected or enhanced more than 360,000 acres, providing habitat for millions of birds and animals, and introduced more than 250,000 children to the wonders of the great outdoors. Visit www.calwaterfowl.org.

El precio de la salud

Una frase muy repetida entre los que les incomoda la presencia de inmigrantes en el país, es que estos últimos no sólo contribuyen a elevar los costos de salud sino que también se aprovechan del sistema de una manera ilegal perjudicando a los demás ciudadanos. En el pasado estos grupos criticaron la política migratoria de las diferentes administraciones por permitir el ingreso al país de ciudadanos extranjeros mayores de edad. Según ellos, estos inmigrantes mayores de edad venían al país a aprovecharse del Seguro Social y sobre todo, del componente de salud que forma parte de éste sin haber aportado nada para sostenerlo.

También están en contra de la política de dar servicios de salud a los inmigrantes, sobre todo a los ilegales, y es que los demás ciudadanos se ven en la obligación de subvencionar los servicios de salud a éstos, ya que, por su condición de indocumentados no pueden pagar o recibir los beneficios de un seguro médico. En otras palabras, los inmigrantes constituían una carga económica en lo que a salud se refiere. Y no sólo una carga, sino que privaban a los ciudadanos de recibir servicios adecuados de salud y además, eran los responsables del crecimiento de los costos de salud de la nación.

En los medios de prensa se dio credibilidad por años a esta posición política sin contar con estudios y con datos que avalaran la verdad de los hechos. La mentira se repitió tanto que mucha gente pensó que esto era cierto. Pero un reciente estudio tiro por los suelos el mito de que los inmigrantes constituyen una sustancial carga para el sistema de salud en los Estados Unidos. Uno de los autores del estudio, todos miembros de un equipo de investigación de especialistas en salud, dijo textualmente: “Nuestro estudio pone a descansar el mito de que el gasto de salud de los inmigrantes es el responsable de los altos costos de salud de la nación.”

Además de derrumbar el mito de que los inmigrantes son responsables de los altos costos de salud del país, el estudio pone de manifiesto la disparidad en los costos de servicios de salud entre los nativos y los inmigrantes. Haciendo comparación entre los dos grupos, los datos revelan lo siguiente: el gasto de salud per cápita anual de los nativos es de $2,546, mientras que el costo de los inmigrantes es $1,139. En visitas al doctor los nativos gastan $410, los inmigrantes $209. Gastos en medicinas, el nativo gasta $509 mientras que el inmigrante gasta $159. En los costos de emergencia también se manifiesta la disparidad, los nativos gastan $91 y los inmigrantes $33.

Los datos del estudio revelan también, que esa disparidad en los gastos se debe a la falta de acceso por parte de los inmigrantes a los centros de salud, ya sea por las barreras del lenguaje, problema financiero o carencia de seguro médico. Esos factores provocan que muchos inmigrantes sólo acudan a buscar servicios de salud cuando tienen enfermedades avanzadas. Es decir, que un gran porcentaje de inmigrantes no participa en el cuidado preventivo de salud que es el más importante para mantener una vida saludable. Un indicativo de esta tendencia es que los inmigrantes, más que cualquier otro grupo, tienden a usar la emergencia en casos de tratamientos básicos en vez de ir a un chequeo ordinario a la oficina de un doctor. Esto se explica por la carencia de un seguro, ya sea privado o público. De acuerdo al estudio ya mencionado, se estima que un 25% de los inmigrantes carece de seguro de salud.

El estudio dice que el inmigrante recibe menos servicio de salud en relación con lo que paga. En ese sentido, uno de los miembros del grupo de estudio revela que: “La verdad es que los inmigrantes reciben menos cuidado de salud que los demás americanos. Nuestros datos indican que muchos inmigrantes están actualmente ayudando a subvencionar el cuidado de salud del resto de nosotros.” Con los resultados de este estudio se pondrán a descansar las acusaciones de que el inmigrante viene aquí para aprovecharse del sistema de salud y que tampoco son culpables de que los costos de salud se hayan disparado a nivel que están ahora.

Riesgos por el calor

Por MYRIAM GRAJALES

El calor excesivo puede causar enfermedades y hasta la muerte. Toda persona que esté expuesta a temperaturas altas por un tiempo prolongado corre el riesgo de sufrir de agotamiento por el calor o insolación. El riesgo es mayor para bebés, niños pequeños y personas de edad avanzada, así como para quienes padecen ciertas enfermedades; sin embargo, este riesgo puede reducirse con medidas sencillas para contrarrestar el calor.

“El cuerpo normalmente se enfría al sudar, pero varios factores afectan la habilidad del cuerpo de enfriarse cuando el clima es extremadamente caluroso,” precisa Anna Martin, consejera en nutrición y ciencias de la familia y del consumidor de Extensión Cooperativa de la Universidad de California. “Cuando hay mucha humedad, el sudor no se evapora tan rápidamente, evitando que el cuerpo libere el calor con rapidez,” explica.

La edad también puede limitar la habilidad del cuerpo de enfriarse, por lo que los bebés, niños pequeños y personas en la tercera edad pueden acalorarse con mucha facilidad. Quienes sufren de obesidad, enfermedades del corazón, mala circulación, fiebre, deshidratación, quemadura por el sol o quienes consumen bebidas alcohólicas o toman ciertos medicamentos también son más susceptibles a los efectos del calor. “Las actividades veraniegas, sean en el campo de juegos o en obras de construcción, se deben realizar a la par con medidas para ayudar al cuerpo a no acalorarse demasiado y evitar enfermedades ocasionadas por el calor excesivo,” apunta Martin. Protéjase teniendo en cuenta estas pautas:

No espere a tener sed para beber. Beba más líquidos, esté muy activo o no. Si su médico le ha restringido la cantidad de líquido que puede beber o toma usted diuréticos, pida su opinión acerca de la cantidad de líquido que puede beber durante los meses calurosos. No beba líquidos que contengan cafeína, alcohol o mucho azúcar ya que causan la pérdida de líquido en los tejidos del cuerpo. Evite también bebidas muy frías que pueden causar retortijones en el estómago.

No salga, y de ser posible, permanezca en un lugar con aire acondicionado. Si no lo tiene en su hogar, vaya a un centro comercial o biblioteca pública. Pasar aunque sea unas pocas horas en un lugar con aire acondicionado ayuda a que su cuerpo se mantenga a una temperatura menor cuando regrese a un lugar sin aire acondicionado. Llame al departamento local de servicios de salud y pregunte si hay algún lugar o refugio cercano donde pueda estar fuera del calor. Los ventiladores eléctricos pueden proporcionar alivio, pero si la temperatura sobrepasa los 90° F, no serán suficientes para evitar enfermedades causadas por el calor excesivo. Es mejor que se tome una ducha o baño con agua fría o vaya a un lugar con aire acondicionado. Use ropa ligera, holgada y de colores claros.

NUNCA deje a alguien en un vehículo estacionado cerrado. Aunque cualquier persona puede sufrir una enfermedad por el calor, ciertas personas corren un riesgo mayor. Esté pendiente de: Bebés y niños pequeños, personas mayores de 65 años de edad, Personas que sufren de alguna enfermedad mental, Personas con enfermedades, especialmente del corazón o presión arterial alta. Visite por lo menos dos veces al día a los adultos que corren un riesgo mayor de sufrir enfermedades relacionadas al calor y fíjese muy bien si presentan señas de agotamiento o insolación.

Limite sus actividades al aire libre a las horas de la mañana y al atardecer. Reduzca su actividad física. Si debe hacer ejercicio, cada hora beba de dos a cuatro vasos de algo frío y sin alcohol. Una bebida para deportistas puede ayudarle a reponer la sal y minerales que se pierden al sudar. Si sigue una dieta con poca sal por indicación de su médico, pida su opinión antes de beber bebidas para deportistas, así como si le ha dicho que limite la cantidad de líquido que toma o si toma diuréticos.

Trate de descansar con frecuencia en algún lugar sombreado. Protéjase del sol con un sombrero de ala ancha y gafas de sol. Póngase también crema protectora contra el sol con un SPF de 15 o más. Los productos que brindan mejor protección dicen “broad spectrum” o “UVA/UVB protection” en la etiqueta.

Festival de la comunidad prevista

La ciudad de Winters los invita a celebrar el tercer festival de la Comunidad, el cual es patrocinado por el Comité Hispano de la ciudad de Winters. El festival se llevará a cabo el día 27 de septiembre. El lugar será el parque Rotario, que se localiza detrás del centro comunitario. Traigan su familia, esta celebración es para todos los habitantes de Winters, vengan a disfrutar la música, la comida, las actividades para los niños y las presentaciones. Habrá actividades y juegos para los niños de todas las edades.

Por demanda popular regresa el concurso buscando la mejor receta en la preparación del platillo típico mexicano, las carnitas. Si usted tiene una receta para la preparación de carnitas, forme su equipo y vengase a preparar su receta a la fiesta. Por supuesto que habrá premios para las mejores recetas, $ 300 al ganador, $150 a quien la gente designe, y $50 a la mejor salsa. Se pide como depósito pagar $50 para la carne, la cual se les dará a los participantes el día del evento. Los partic-ipantes deberán usar sus propios ingredientes al cocinar las carnitas. Se tendrá un panel para juzgar, en este caso probar las carnitas, y seleccionará el primer lugar, y la misma gente decidirá el segundo lugar.

Se les pide a los participantes decorar su puesto en una manera festiva y familiar, el panel de jueces decidirá el ganador, basado en el sabor y en la textura de las carnitas, los equipos también deben de poner su propia salsa, así que si tiene una receta favorita, por favor venga y compártala.

Se tienen espacios disponibles para vender comida, para personas o grupos de la comunidad, a los encargados de estos espacios se les pedirá que tengan actividades para los niños, como bingo, artes, manualidades o juegos. Si quiere mas información puede hablar al teléfono 795-4910 ext. 111 con Mary Jo Rodolfa, o Dawn Van Dyke al teléfono 795-4910, ext. 108. La fecha límite para la inscripción es el 18 de septiembre, a las 5 p.m., en el City Hall.

Peligros del virus de Parvo

En el pueblo se han detectado casos de parvo virosis en algunos perros, es una grave enfermedad, producida por un virus resistente, que ataca con mayor frecuencia a cachorros, aunque algunos adultos y viejos, también pueden contraerla.

El parvovirus es sumamente resistente, pudiendo permanecer activo en suelos contaminados por material fecal infectado, por más de seis meses, no pudiendo ser eliminado por los desinfectantes y detergentes que se consiguen en el mercado.

Los animales mas afectados, son los cachorros, especialmente aquellos cuyas madres no han sido vacunadas, o aquellos ejemplares que no han sido desparasitados.

Los síntomas que presenta un cachorro con parvo virosis, son, en la forma intestinal, fiebre, decaimiento, falta de apetito, vómitos espumosos y diarreas sanguinolentas.

Lo fundamental, es prevenir la enfermedad, lo cual se logra cumpliendo en el cachorro su calendario de vacunaciones, y una buena nutrición, y en los perros adultos, realizar las correspondientes revacunaciones y desparasitaciones periódicas.
